Students now have priority in Milo Bail Student Center computer lab

SCOTT STEWART
STAFF WRITER

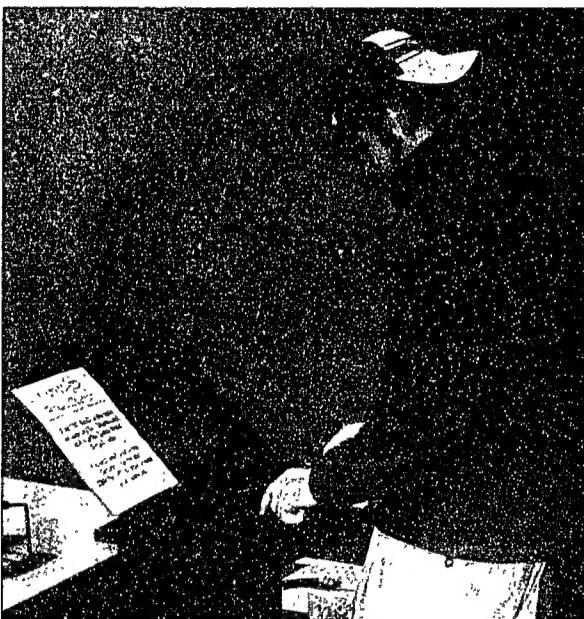

Anyone who has not been in the Milo Bail Student Center computer lab this semester might be in for a small surprise the next time they pay a visit.

Starting this semester, students are asked to login at the MBSC using their UNO NetID, the same username and password used for myUNO, myMail, EBRUNO and other campus technology services. This does not apply to the open-access kiosks throughout the building.

This change comes for a couple of reasons. First, the MBSC lab is the most heavily used lab on campus, lines at the door are a common sight, and is open far later than the other labs (3 a.m. Sunday through Thursday, 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday).

Accordingly, Information Technology Services wanted to make sure that students and faculty had priority in this lab over alumni, visitors, certain community members and other possible authorized users.

Steven Lendl, director of Information Technology Infrastructure, said this new system will "help to make sure the environment stays as safe as possible." He said that when asked, students in the lab had indicated that they wanted preferential access.

Josh Point

UNL has already implemented a similar system in some of their computer labs.

"It is important to consider who uses the lab," Lendl said.

For example, computers in the library are more frequently used by guests, whereas the MBSC is used for specific tasks by students, with things like the Internet, e-mail, Microsoft Office, etc.

In addition to security benefits, students may also notice a couple new conveniences that arise from the NetID logins.

One convenience is that anytime you save a file to 'My Documents' in the MBSC, it is automatically copied onto myFolder, a web-based alternative to floppy disks or flash memory drives. Another convenience is that Internet Explorer favorites are also saved, so that the next time you logon at the MBSC, you will be able to access Web sites you book marked previously.

About the only downside is having to remember to log off the machine when you finish. Users can log off by pressing Ctrl-Alt-Delete and selecting 'Log off' from the menu options (or by pressing 'enter').

Some students might also need to lookup their UNO NetID. Currently, there is a kiosk in the MBSC lab where you are able to lookup your username and reset your password.

ITS said that they helped approximately 500 students lookup their NetIDs, and they expect the rate of students requiring resets to continue to decline over the next couple weeks as students get a set ID and password.

Smoking ban, heated bus stops discussed at new administration's first Student Government meeting

CRYSTAL R. REID
NEWS EDITOR

Although the smoking ban issue may not be resolved this semester, Student Government voted to make a statement against the ban in their recent meeting last Thursday.

Student senators agreed that despite the ban not being an issue this semester, they needed this statement as a precursor to any future smoking ban considerations. The student senate felt that such a statement generally represents the students' attitudes about the potential ban.

Students feeling the winter bite while waiting at the shuttle bus stop could be in for some relief in the next couple of years. Discussion started regarding the possibility of funding a way to heat the frigid bus stops in the winter, although there has been no research regarding cost and maintenance.

"This is something that could benefit far more students," Senator Justin Ptacnik said.

Speaker Steve Massara continuously advocated that the senators get out and talk to the students that they represent so the senate can help support them.

"We made a commitment when we were elected to represent the students," Massara said. "Write this down: meet with your students."

This meeting was newly elected President/Regent Elizabeth Kraemer and Vice President Lamarr Womble's first meeting in office. Kraemer's energy and passion bubbled through as she made her first presentation to the senate.

"Feel free to come into my office," she said. "Please contact me, E-mail me or call me."

had the difficult task of correctly moving to appoint, move to vote, and announcing the necessary appointments. His first time at the podium was a bumpy one, but he soared through it with humble smiles and apologies.

"This is fresh for me, so bear with me," he said, before he began to introduce the new senate appointments.

New appointments are as follows:

Alex Skillman - Student Court Justice
Evan Lee - Graduate Senator

Mujahid Washinton, Jane Splitberger - Students At Large/SABC

There are still several positions to be filled, including Student Court, Traffic Appeals, and six openings on Student Elections Commission.

New spam blockers help faculty block unwanted mail

BRYAN KOHLER

Spam:

1. A canned mystery meat.
2. Unsolicited e-mail, often of a commercial nature, sent indiscriminately to multiple mailing lists, individuals, or newsgroups; junk e-mail.

Even with all of the court cases involving spammers and other people who want to make our e-mail miserable, there is one thing that UNO has: SpamJam.

SpamJam is an anti-spam program, however available only to faculty and staff.

SpamJam is quite a unique system that gives the user a daily report of possible spam, giving him the option to delete it or store it. Also, the user can choose to block e-mail from spam accounts or specific sites. SpamJam can be accessed through the MyMail Web site, where the user can configure it and do what he must.

Sadly, spammers still get through. It's not because the system is necessarily bad, but spammers are getting more sneaky as the days go by. As an attempt to prevent the new spammers, the system has an automatic update feature that keeps it up to date with the latest spam trends. The faculty just needs to request the program to get it.

It sounds nice, doesn't it?

Why don't the students have such a program? It's quite simple, actually. As of now, the SpamJam system can only hold approximately 5,000 e-mail accounts, which is enough to cover the faculty and staff. There are approximately 16,000 student accounts.

Then again, the student accounts are protected by SpamHaus (www.spamhaus.org), a less aggressive anti-spam program. Although it usually blocks incredibly obvious spam, it's better than having nothing at this point.

Steven Lendl, an Information Technology Services staff member, said that they are looking forward to a new port for student accounts. Choosing whether or not to have the program will be entirely the student's decision because it's on an opt in/out basis. Basically, if you want it, you are.

UNO has been looking for a new program for quite some time and SpamJam seemed to be the best deal.

South Omaha Computer lab to open soon

SCOTT STEWART
STAFF WRITER

UNO Information Technology Services (ITS) will open a new computer lab in South Omaha sometime between mid-February and early March. The lab is being constructed in partnership with the Omaha Housing Authority for the benefit of UNO students living in South Omaha as well as community members in the local area.

The lab will be built in an effort by ITS to address the issue of the "digital divide" in Omaha: the gap between people who have computers and Internet access and those who do not. When ITS realized that over 30 percent of UNO students live in North or South Omaha, areas where computer ownership and availability is considerably lower, it decided to take action.

One of ITS's goals, according to its 2004

Strategic Initiative, is to "extend outreach and community engagement" through the creation of community-based technology labs.

Initially, the project began with the creation of a computer lab in North Omaha built by ITS and the Urban League of Nebraska. Located on the second floor of the Gateway Building, 4402 N. 21st St., the Community Technology Center (CTC) was an immediate success.

The CTC has two classrooms with a total of 45 workstations similar to the ones found in other UNO computer labs. Several programs have already found a home there, such as GED and ACT preparation classes, computer training for community members, and the Independence

Project, a program that mixes computer software with career and personal training.

Because of the CTC's success, ITS began efforts to create a South Omaha lab. ITS partnered with the Omaha Housing Authority, providing the technical elements to the OHA's space and personnel contribution.

Assistant Planning Director of Distance Education for ITS Lanyce Keel said, "Community members are thrilled."

She went on to say that one reason ITS decided to create these labs was that the 24-hour labs on campus were not well utilized at night.

"By the time [lower-income students] fulfill their obligations, there is no time to come back to campus to use the computer."

Consequently, ITS hopes to improve both labs' availability to students. Currently the North Omaha CTC is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekdays.

The South Omaha lab is expected to initially offer similar hours. ITS is working to expand these hours to allow students who work during the day to be able to utilize the labs in the evening.

When the North Omaha CTC was opened, students in the area received a postcard informing them of the new lab. ITS plans to do the same when the South Omaha lab opens.

The announcement will also be made through UNO and Omaha Housing Authority communication channels, the local press, local churches, a focus group with area schools, and a locally-popular radio station.

Currently the project is on schedule to be completed by March 1, possibly sooner. The lab will be located in the LaFern Williams Center, 3010 R St. and will have over a dozen workstations available for use.

Child Care Center collecting funds for tsunami relief

The UNO Child Care Center has joined forces with hundreds of organizations across the globe to collect donations for the Red Cross Tsunami Relief Fund.

The center's project is titled "A Handful of Hope." Children are collecting pennies and other monetary donations for the relief fund. In addition, the center has "challenged" the Omaha 2000 Child Development Center to see which organization can raise the most money.

Campus donations to "A Handful of Hope" are welcome through Jan. 31. They can be dropped off at the center, located in Annex 47.

For more information, contact Sandy Wlaschin at 554-3398.

Two Spirit events set for this week

The UNO Spirit Committee has designated a pair of campus events as UNO Spirit Committee Events next week. They are as follows:

Date: Wednesday, Jan. 26
Event: RECapalooza
Time: 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Location: Health, Physical Education and Recreation Building

Date: Saturday, Jan. 29
Event: UNO wrestling vs. Northern State
Time: 7 p.m.

Location: Sapp Fieldhouse

Faculty asked to RSVP for academic procession Jan. 27

UNO faculty members who wish to participate in the academic procession as part of University of Nebraska President James B. Milliken's installation ceremony should contact Lexie Hollertz at (402) 472-7121 or lhollertz@nebraska.edu.

The installation will be held Thursday at 10 a.m. in the Strauss Performing Arts Center Recital Hall.

Those participating in the procession should meet and robe in 109 Strauss Performing Arts Center no later than 9:15 a.m. Jan. 27. Those who need academic attire should visit the Web at <http://www.nebraska.edu>.

Chancellor Belck loves her UNO college life

JESSICA GOLDONI
STAFF WRITER

Beneath the regal appearance, the bubbly attitude, the warm southern accent and the kindhearted smile, there lies one of the hardest working women on UNO's campus, Chancellor Nancy Belck.

Belck loves UNO. She has made it her home since Sept. 1, 1997. But UNO isn't the first college campus she has encountered.

Belck has been in a university atmosphere practically her entire life. Both her parents were college professors. Her first memories were of the campus nursery, where she played her days away at the age of 18 months. As she grew up, her parents did not pressure her to work at a college as they did. In fact, they did the opposite — they encouraged her to fully explore her options. But despite her parent's encouragement, she found her calling — the hustle and bustle of campus life.

After graduating from Louisiana Technical University with her bachelor degree in teacher education, University of Tennessee with her master's in textile science and Michigan State University with her Ph.D in Family Ecology and Communication, Belck plunged headfirst into her university career. She has held many administrative and faculty positions including provost and vice chancellor for Academic Affairs at Louisiana State and chancellor of Southern Illinois University.

Overall, Belck has spent close to 30 years in higher education and according

Josh Williamson

Since 1997, Chancellor Nancy Belck has enthusiastically called UNO her home.

to her, it was definitely the right life choice.

"Life is too short not to enjoy it. I strive to do something that not only makes a difference, but that I also enjoy," she said.

Belck surely enjoys her job, but it can be very stressful as the chancellor of a university. In order to de-stress, Belck takes full advantage of her off time. She is flight certified and loves to fly airplanes around the country with her husband Jack Belck, a communications consultant.

Belck also adores spending time with others close to her heart: her son Scott and grandson Jack, and Caesar, Cleopatra and Bathsheba — her three dogs.

Besides spending time with her family and animals, she enjoys taking time out of her day to experience the community. In fact, she has a three-mile walking appointment every morning. She has walked with everyone from UNO faculty, staff and students to community members, governors and senators.

Besides the exercise, she likes to walk with other people because she is "always eager to meet new people and learn about them and their lives, it is easier to do this when I walk — you find out much more than in an official setting," Belck said.

Belck has always had big plans for UNO. Within her first 10 days in office, she presided over the groundbreaking of the Peter Kiewit Building, witnessed the beginning of UNO's Division I hockey team and started planning and fundraising for the university housing project.

Although she has accomplished much, Belck has faced many challenges during her career at UNO, the biggest of which were the statewide budget cuts.

The budget cuts hit the campus hard, but Belck was determined to "keep the faculty, staff and students unified and strong." Although it was a trying time, "we are stronger and a more focused university because of it," she said.

This next year just proves how accomplished UNO has become, with many new and exciting things in the works. Belck's agenda for 2005 includes the renovation of the Criss Library, continued cooperative work with the Aksarben Trust to partner on possible developments on South Campus and creating a tangible College of Public Affairs and Community Service (CPACS) by utilizing the old engineering building.

"UNO has to be about the people — people oriented," Belck has said.

20 Questions for a UNO student

ANGI SADA
SENIOR STAFF WRITER

Name: Ray Kershner
Major: Chiropractic undergraduate program
Year: Sophomore
Hometown: Hastings, Neb.

1.) Describe yourself in five words.
"Goofy, optimistic, nice, jocular, reliable."

2.) Of what accomplishment are you most proud and why?
"I don't know. I'm proud of a lot of them. Finishing massage school."

3.) What would you most like to accomplish in the future?
"To get my D.C., finish college."

4.) Where do you see yourself in 10 years?
"Hopefully, I'll be graduated, have my D.C. Either I'll be here or in California."

5.) Who is your favorite band right now?
"Cradle of Filth."

6.) Who is your favorite performer of all time?
"KISS."

7.) What is in your CD player right now?
"It's a five-disc changer. Black Dahlia Murder, Stone Sour, Diana Krall, Kenny Wayne Shepard, Pearl Jam."

8.) What album would sum up the last 10 years of your life?
"Killswitch Engage's End of All Heartaches."

9.) Why did you choose UNO?

"Because it's here in Omaha."

10.) What would you change about UNO?
"I don't think that I've been here long enough to give an honest answer on that."

11.) What is the best thing about UNO?
"So far, everyone's been really nice to me, really friendly. The professors work with me and stuff."

12.) What is the most important issue at hand for students?
"Graduation."

13.) What advice would you give to incoming freshmen?
"Don't get too overwhelmed and leave some time to play."

14.) Do you have anything that you would like to say to your professors?
"Pull my finger."

15.) What historical figure would you most like to meet and what would you ask them?
"Elizabeth Bathory. How often does she have to bathe in blood to retain her beauty?"

16.) If you could live anywhere, where would it be?
"Some place in England."

17.) Where is the coolest place you ever visited?
"England."

18.) What is your favorite book?
"The Vampire LeStat from Anne Rice."

19.) Why do blind people wear sunglasses?
"Protection. My stick takes care of everything below, but not things like low hanging branches."

20.) What would you like us to ask the next person interviewed?
"Would they pull my finger?"

The fashionable male student

This week, I will be devoting my column to menswear only. Maybe you guys will read it, maybe not. Maybe you'll even do something with it, but I can only hope.

I'll admit it. I am sick of seeing every guy on campus in jeans and t-shirts, with the occasional fleece or sweatshirt thrown on top for warmth. I apologize to those of you who feel that you know what you are doing, as well as those of you who wouldn't waste your time caring about clothes. But for that small percentage who maybe, just maybe, although you wouldn't straight up ask for help, want to know what they can do to improve themselves in this department, please read on.

I have helped many a guy friend with this dilemma in my day and what I perceive to be the number one problem is the fact that they are just clueless. They walk into a store, pick up a couple shirts and call it a day. Or they let the sales girl/guy talk them into buying something. Not the way to handle this, gentlemen.

I suggest looking through magazines or online before you buy anything to get an idea of what look you are going for. In fact, I suggest you all subscribe to GQ right now. At least pick up one copy, for research purposes.

It's important to know that you don't have to run around like some of these guys in catalogs/magazines/online do. You don't have to rock the eccentric stuff they feature on the runways, so don't let that scare you away. Even I am scared when I watch runway shows. They are supposed to

Real Fashion

Alex May

scare you, I think.

So, get an idea in your mind of what statement you want to make. For instance, are you punk or skater inspired? Are you a hard-core preppie? Are you trendy and funky? You should have a pretty good idea of what you want people to see you as.

One Web site that

I highly recommend to gentlemen of any type is urbn.com, Urban Outfitters' Web site. Not only will they have stuff that not many people around here have, but they also offer a good selection of head-to-toe gear that is easy to put together into outfits.

For you more sophisticated guys, check out men.style.com to see the latest designers and their take on current menswear. Luckily, this GQ affiliated site has guides to help you, too. Check out the fail-safe fashion section for guides to buying watches, swimsuits and boots, or look at the top-ten section under fashion for a rundown on spring's hottest trends. This site also features a high-tech gear section including everything the fashionable man desires, like the hottest, newest MP3 player, gaming, digicam, phone and sporting equipment.

These sites should give you a good base idea of what is hot at the moment. Remember that it always starts with the denim, though. Get a great pair of jeans with the perfect wash and fit, and you will never be mistaken for clueless again. You can always ask a fashionable female friend to go shopping with you, too. We do know what we are doing after all.

Are We There Yet? good for the kiddies

REVIEW BY SANEL SELIMOVIC
STAFF WRITER

This weekend I went to see Are We There Yet? with several friends of mine. It was more of a way to try and forget that the wind that was blowing at 40 mph outside, and also because it was a favor for a little friend whom we brought along.

As I walked into the Village Pointe Cinema, a sense of dread came over me and cold sweat poured down my face.

"This is it," I said to myself. "I'm about to see a movie featuring little brats—in a theater full of little brats—and on top of it all, the movie features rapper/actor Ice Cube."

Fortunately for me, the movie didn't turn out all that bad after all. It's simply another love story, but it doesn't entirely fail at that.

Nick, played by Ice Cube, is a very wealthy owner of a sporting collectibles store. With his quick eye for the ladies, Nick soon falls in love with a widow, Suzanne (Nia Long), and they seem to hit it off right from the beginning. However, all is not well in Nick-land, as Suzanne turns out to have two children, Lindsey and Kevin, who are simply determined to wreck any relationships their mother engages in.

As the story unfolds, Suzanne leaves to Vancouver to supervise a New Year's event for her company, and Nick reluctantly accepts to take her two kids on a flight to Vancouver. The kids are determined to make this a trip from hell for Nick, and after forcing him to miss the flight and putting a dent in his brand-new Lincoln Navigator, utter chaos ensues.

By the time it all finally wrapped up, I felt pretty good about this movie. It is obviously not a top-notch movie of the year, but it didn't necessarily fall apart either. Ice Cube did a very good job, but it did take me awhile to warm up to these characters. The kids in the movie were not the most wonderful actors, as evident through their in-your-face fake crying, but there is certainly plenty of chemistry between these three characters.

In the end, this movie was simply about having a little innocent fun. It doesn't try to achieve something it's not, which is certainly refreshing when each upcoming movie is being pitched as a story of "epic" proportions. If you have little brothers, sisters or cousins you've wanted to spend some quality time with, then this would be a great movie to check out. At only 91 minutes in running time, it is very short and relatively fast-paced, so you won't find yourself yawning between scenes.

Overall, I give it 3.5 out of 5 Sanelys.

Hip Hop Notes

COMMENTARY BY JULIAN IVEY
STAFF WRITER

Welcome back, ladies and gentlemen. Did you know that the NAACP wants the godfather of hip-hop, Russell Simmons, to be its next president? Current members feel he would speak to the younger demographic they want to reach and help in fundraising efforts.

Some in the group would like a current member to take the position. Simmons has yet to comment. Sounds like a good move to me, but what do I know?

Jimmy James Johnson, the man who allegedly punched Dr. Dre at the Vibe Awards, confessed to the Santa Monica Police Department that Suge Knight paid him to assault Dre. This is probably no surprise to anyone. Equally unsurprising is that Knight has denied any involvement.

The Game debuted strong, moving roughly 600,000 copies of The Documentary. I haven't seen a crew come out and have so much success individually, except the Wu-Tang Clan, and G-Unit has outdone them, at least according to popular demand. My homeboy, Ian, slipped me a copy and I'm impressed.

Like Snoop Dogg, 50 Cent is also endorsing a car, the new 2006 Dodge Charger, which you'll see The Game driving in the video for his single, "How We Do." Good job marketing yourself, 50.

Snoop Dogg and Paris Hilton have been catching flack for the hottest new candy on the streets, Chronic Candy. It promises every lick of the hemp-rooted gumdrops and lollipops is like taking a hit.

The candies do not contain THC, the ingredient that intoxicates marijuana users, but does come in "nickel bags" and "20 sacks." The candy has been imported from Switzerland for the past four years. Local politicians are upset about the message it sends to children but Chronic Candy's founder says it was never intended for children. Isn't capitalism great?

50's new album is said to feature a song called "Piggy Bank" in which he disses Jadakiss, Fat Joe, Nas and Kelis. Jadakiss was about to fire back at his label mate when Jimmy Iovine, the Chairman of Interscope Records, contacted Kiss and forbid him from dissing 50 Cent. Rumor has it Iovine is scared that Kiss may do to 50's career what 50 did to Ja Rule's career.

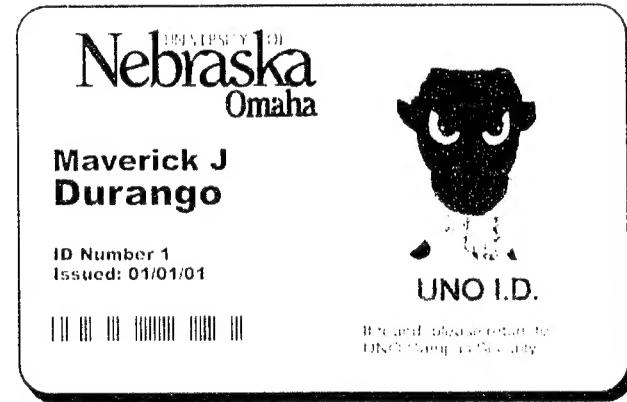

Pharrell's lawsuit against Reebok has already been settled. Both parties decided to terminate the agreement. It was an amicable split, and Reebok will sell the shoes until late June.

B.G. and Lil Wayne are cool again. Word on the street is they have been at concerts performing together and Wayne now understands the issues B.G. and Juvenile had with Cash Money Records because he is now going through the same thing.

Midi Mafia is gearing up to launch their new label, Family Ties. I know most of you have never heard of the production duo, but you will. They've worked with some big names and should make a name for themselves in 2005.

Slum Village producer Jay-Dee, a.k.a. J-Dilla, has been in the hospital with an unknown ailment. Hopefully he'll get well soon because he's another one of those good producers a lot of people haven't really heard of.

Well hip-hoppers, that's all I have for you this week. Live long and prosper.

Wish You Were There

A quick re-cap of a concert you may have missed

Toby Keith and Ted Nugent at the Qwest Center

REVIEW BY JENNIFER WILLIAMS
STAFF WRITER

In front of a packed crowd at the Qwest
Center on last Friday, Ted Nugent and Toby Keith sent out a message of patriotism that echoed from the first note to the last chorus.

The message was not only limited to the music but was also prevalent in the performers' attire. Nugent sported a shirt symbolizing the American flag and Keith was wearing the same shirt that he has worn on his many USO tours; a button-down denim shirt that has a design embroidered on the chest.

During Nugent's set,
the stage was decorated like an Iraqi war zone
complete with a camouflage net
and a rundown
building with a United States flag
draped in front.

The band for both performers
was excellent,
providing as much
flare as the singers
themselves.
Nugent, who is also known as the
"Motor City Mad Man," performed
some of his best known songs while clips of grandfathers and fathers teaching young children how to hunt were shown on the side of the stage.

Nugent provided a high-energy performance that continued into Keith's set.

Keith's performance started out with a silhouette of the sign, "I Love This Bar", a song which has opened up a new audience to him last year. His fans loved the song but it also gained popularity with the younger college students who he has been trying to target for the last few years.

The band went on stage as a two-minute introductory video (sponsored by Ford) played. It featured Keith talking out loud to a dog that, sitting in the front seat of his Ford truck with him, was going to a bar for a performance. But when Keith gets there the door is locked, the dog is out of the truck holding a chain and proceeds to think, "Pull my chain." Keith tears down the building using his truck.

The audience was out of its seats and cheering all night, while Keith performed mostly songs from his Greatest Hits 2 album.

Right in the middle of the performance, singer/songwriter Scott Emerick came to the stage and performed some of the songs that he and Keith has collaborated on.

Songs that they jokingly called "bus
songs," including "I Can't Take You Anywhere," and "The Taliban Song."

Michelle Bishop

which poked fun at the former regime in Afghanistan. But the funniest song they performed was called "I'll Never Smoke Weed With Willie Again," which chronicles his experience at a Farm Aid concert with country music legend Willie Nelson.

As the night drew to a close, Keith performed the song that has garnered the most controversy, "Courtesy of the Red, White and Blue (The Angry American)." This is the same song that he was asked not to perform at the Mall in Washington DC on July 4 last year. Keith decided to not perform entirely at that event as a matter of principle.

As the concert ended, fans were chanting "U-S-A" over and over, bringing to an end something more resembling political rally than a concert. The only difference was that people had to buy tickets to attend.

Women upset Coyotes; now 3-1 in NCC

J. PARKER ADAIR
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

For the third time in four games, the UNO women's basketball team upset a nationally ranked opponent. Thursday night, the Mavericks defeated No. 16 South Dakota 67-61.

UNO opened North Central Conference play with wins over then No. 20 Augustana and No. 8 North Dakota Jan. 6 and 8, respectively. After losing the rematch against UND last Friday, UNO dropped USD in Vermillion.

The Mavericks came out of an early 5-5 tie to begin a lead less than four minutes into the contest.

Down by three, the largest deficit of the game, Karen Thies hit a 3-pointer. JJ Smith broke the tie with a 3-pointer, hit a lay-up and scored on two more 3's to give UNO a six-point lead. Smith recorded eight consecutive points in just over two minutes.

UNO built a 14-point lead as late as 5:05 in the first half on a Lindsey Peterson 3, but USD chipped the lead to 35-27 at halftime.

The Coyotes trimmed the lead to four points before UNO hit its first field goal in 6:32. Carlye Jones and Smith each had lay-ups to put the Mavs up eight.

J.J. Smith scored 17 points Thursday.

Smith extended the lead to nine with 15:04 left, but USD began to show why it was ranked nationally and tenth regionally.

Ashley Robinette hit two free throws at 4:45 to tie the game and hit a jumper at 3:04 to take the first lead since the game's first two minutes. She converted a 3-point play to retake the lead, giving her seven-consecutive points in just more than two minutes.

With the clock at 2:24, Thies hit a jumper to tie the game. Peterson and Smith each added 3's for a four-point lead, and Thies knocked in both her free throws at the end to seal the win.

Thies led all scorers (18), rebounders (nine) and passers (seven assists) in 39 minutes. Smith recorded 17 points and seven rebounds. Peterson added 13 points.

The story of the game was UNO winning the rebounding battle 41-27. That included an outstanding plus-ten offensive rebounding margin for the Mavs.

UNO looks to keep its top spot in the NCC when the Mavs travel north again, taking on St. Cloud State on Thursday. The Huskies are ranked No. 4 in the North Central Region, but they have dropped games to Augustana and North Dakota in consecutive weekends. The 6 p.m. game will be broadcast on 1620 AM radio.

Mavs earn split in Oxford; Fall back to 4th in CCHA standings

ANGIE PECK
STAFF WRITER

The Mavericks skated into Goggin Ice Arena Friday night in Oxford, Ohio, and skated away with their first win at the building. However, undisciplined play Saturday ended the Mavs unbeaten Central Collegiate Hockey Association streak at six.

UNO played short handed seven times in the first period, but the Redhawks only needed one to put numbers on the board Friday.

After Dan Hacker and Mike Lefley were placed in the box on the same play, Miami's Marty Guerin scored the Redhawks first power play goal in 33 chances, at the 5:24 mark.

UNO did not allow the lead to stand for long. David Phillips picked in his seventh goal of the season with help from Brandon Scero and Bryan Marshall at 7:58.

The score remained tied at one until 49 seconds into the second period when Bill Thomas picked up his first of two goals on the night with a breakaway. Thomas picked up a turnover in the neutral zone, raced down the left wing and beat Miami goaltender Brandon Crawford-West.

Dan Hacker added a shorthanded goal at the 8:43 mark to give the Mavericks a comfy two-goal lead that stood until third period.

The Redhawks capitalized on another UNO penalty to bring the score within one goal. The UNO's scoring dual Scott Parse and Bill Thomas helped the Mavs regain a two-goal lead with a power play goal at the 4:10 mark giving UNO the 5-2 win.

The win in Oxford, Ohio was the first in seven tries for the Mavericks. UNO won three road games in a row after only winning one road win the rest of the season. The last time UNO was undefeated in a three-game road stretch was January 2002 when they went 2-0-1 against Northern Michigan and Notre Dame.

Undisciplined play ended the Mavs CCHA unbeaten streak at six games the next night. Miami scored three goals in the first period to skate away with a 4-2 victory.

UNO started the scoring just 1:49 into the contest. Mick Lawrence tallied his third goal of the season on an odd man rush.

Miami answered with three goals in only eight minutes. At 5:36 of the first, Miami's Joe

Confidence and momentum re-established for Maverick men

CHRISTEN HARRINGTON
STAFF WRITER

There were plenty of reasons to celebrate for the UNO men's basketball team after Thursday night's 87-76 win at the University of South Dakota.

The Mavericks improved their record to 16-3, their North Central Conference record to 2-2 and snapped a two-game losing streak.

"It was important to get our confidence back, because we had two losses in a row after winning 12 straight games," Head Coach Kevin McKenna said.

The No. 23 Mavericks led by as many as 27 points early in the second half and out rebounded their opponent 40-22, before defeating No. 18 South Dakota. South Dakota (15-2, 2-1) split four games with the Mavericks last season. Each won on the opponent's court during the NCC season. UNO won the NCC Championship game, but USD won their NCAA tournament first-round match.

Calvin Kapels boasted another solid performance in Thursday's game. The junior guard led the Mavericks in scoring with 20 points and he snagged five rebounds, passed for three assists and recorded two steals.

"He's a do-it-all guy for us," McKenna said. "He scores, defends; he's like having a coach on the floor."

The Mavericks had five players score in double digits. Quantel Murphy joined Kapels by contributing 15 points, aided by a perfect night from the 3-point line. Levy Jones scored 14 points, Randy Bland finished with 12 points and Abdul Mills added 11 points for the Mavericks.

Although the Mavericks are having a great season, there is always room for improvement, especially with the free-throw shooting percentage. The Mavericks shot just 59 percent from the free throw line in Thursday's game. They are just 62 percent on the season.

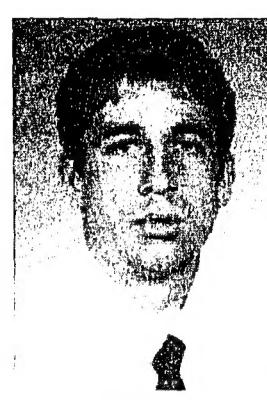

"We are not shooting the ball well at all, it's a mental block," McKenna said. "We practice our free-throws before, during, and after practice, we're doing everything to improve our percentage."

Not only are the free throws a problem for the Mavericks, but the schedule down the line only gets tougher in conference play. The Mavericks have two games against St. Cloud State (14-3), a rematch at home against South Dakota (15-2), and two tough games against Minnesota State-Mankato (17-2). UNO lost twice to Mankato last season by at least nine points in each game.

"They (Mankato) are the most talented team in the league, and I think they're one of the top teams in the country," McKenna said. "We will have to play well with very few mistakes to stay in that game."

McKenna and the Mavs hit the road to Minnesota Thursday for the next contest with St. Cloud State.

"Anytime you play a good team on the road, you catch our teams' attention, and they (St. Cloud State) played Mankato in overtime a week ago. We had good games in the past with them and they play good at home," McKenna said.

Calvin Kapels

Cooper tied the game with his first goal of the season. Just one minute later, Miami took the lead off a 5-on-3 Matt Christie power play goal. Miami's final goal of the first period came from Andy Nelson making the score 3-1.

UNO finally got back on the board 34 seconds into the second period. Thomas picked up a turnover behind the Miami net and passed it to Parse, who beat Miami goalie Crawford-West for his 13th goal of the year.

Miami's final goal was a shorthanded breakaway from Nathan Davis.

UNO was called for 19
